

Language Matters

Language Matters is a new program of Global Language Project (GLP) which features a quarterly luncheon series, designed to support our mission of bringing foreign language instruction to undeserved public school children in New York City. The luncheons bring together business leaders, investors, educational reformers, philanthropists, and entrepreneurs to hear guest speakers address issues of world citizenship and to discuss how we can help students become successful participants in a competitive global workplace.

Global Language Project reaches over 200 influentials via its quarterly luncheon series, from high level corporate executives, to leaders in public education. With the support of our members, Global Language Project is ensuring that every child has access to foreign language learning, regardless of his or family's resources.

Sponsors of Language Matters benefit from exposure to a curated list of leading professionals, including Top Fortune 500 companies, who are invested in helping all children find a place in the global economy.

Membership Information:

$500 - Opportunity to attend a Language Matters luncheon; inclusion of your company's name on invitations that go to a list of 200 influentials; and inclusion of your company's information in packets distributed at the event

$1,500 - In addition to the aforementioned benefits: opportunity to be named as the main sponsor of the event; and the chance to offer introductory remarks about your company to our audience at the event

$2,500 - In addition to the aforementioned benefits; become a member of the Language Matters professional network for one year with complimentary admission to all Language Matters events

Your donation to Global Language Project provides free foreign language instruction to underserved students, empowering them to participate in a multilingual world. Global Language Project is a registered 501(c)(3) organization. All donations are 100% tax-deductible.

Thank you for joining us in helping a new generation of children become global citizens.
